Lusardi Appointed Director of Italy's New Financial Education Committee

Yesterday, Professor Lusardi was appointed by Italy's Minister of Economy and Finance, Pier Carlo Padoan, as director of the newly established Financial Education Committee. In his official announcement, Minister Padoan described Lusardi as "an undisputed authority in the field," and stated that the committee will fill a vital gap in the Italian system. The opportunity for Professor Lusardi to serve in this capacity reflects a step forward in building a global community of countries with national strategies for financial literacy. It also supports GFLEC's vision of promoting the development of a financially literate world.
